Letter to Archduke Godfrey:

My Dearest Archduke Godfrey,

I sorry hear 'bout your sister Mary's (tragic passing). She's gone now, and it hurts my heart. +3

I remember when we were kids in Riverton, climbing trees without a care in the world. +1

Mary's (rode horses) with us, her spirit bright like the sun. She had a good soul. +1

I remember those days in the (fields), wind in hair, horses running. Simple joy. +1

I hope the (beautiful angels) guide her soul to rest. Riverton won't be the same without her. +0

In sorrow and friendship,

Andrew Borders

Knight of Riverton

5 points: The Archduke responds kindly, but is quick to criticize your letter. You will unlikely hear from him for some months.

Letter to the Art Dealer:

Honorable Christina Bowbridge,

(I'm very sorry) for reaching out to you under such circumstances, but we should talk about this before the deal. +0

I have some doubts about the authenticity of the portrait of (his graceful Royal Highness Prince Edward IV). +2

Would you let me bring an appraiser to (quickly inspect) the art before we finish our deal? +2

I can speak for his (immense skill) in the art industry, and he'll be fair in his decisions. +0

I don't want to (tick you off), so please reach out to me with any questions and concerns.

Sincerely,

Andrew Borders

Knight of Riverton

4 points: Christina takes great offense to your letter and responds with a scathing letter about your character. She will not sell you the painting...ever.

Letter to the Father:

My Dearest Mr. Winsborough,

I pen this letter with a heavy heart, burdened by the somber news I must convey. Please accept (my heavy infinite condolences) on the passing of (your boy), Rupert. +3

Last night in the (torrential downpour), I discovered his (lifeless corpse) near our residences. +3

With a sorrowful heart, I summoned a (guard) to ensure that the proper authorities were informed and could investigate the matter. +0

I extend my sincerest condolences, and I share in your grief during this trying time.

Sincerely,

Andrew Borders

Knight of Riverton

6 points: Anthony's is clearly disappointed in how you have relayed the information to him, but he does not blame you.

Letter to the King:

Dear (Gerald), +1

I'm writing to alert you to a (very curious individual) (deeply hidden) in your palace staff. +2

After witnessing his (worrying) behavior, I started to suspect a scheme against you.

Please watch out for a man with a (horribly buggered face) and try to steer clear of any crowds until I can be sure you're safe from him. +0

Sincerely,

Andrew Borders

Knight of Riverton

3 points: The King does not respond. Several days after you sent your missive you are visited by the royal guard and brought to prison for your disrespectful letter
